Indiana Pain Management Doctor Named to Top 70 List

Rajive K. Adlaka, MD, who was recently named to Becker's ASC Review publication of the 70 Best Pain Physicians in America, is the medical director of Pain Control Associates in Crown Point, Ind., where he treat patients with spinal disorders, chronic and acute pain, osteoarthritis and neck pain. In addition to his clinical practice, he has served as an instructor for the American Society of Interventional Pain Physicians and helped develop the society's chronic narcotic guidelines.

"We are very thrilled to be a part of this publication", said Adlaka. "I was trained as an anesthesiologist, but that didn't involve the patient contact that I get in the pain clinic. Over time, I found that I enjoyed meeting with patients and watching their improvement. I truly enjoy the follow up with my patients and watching them get better."

Selections for Becker's list were based on awards received from major organizations in the field, leadership in those organizations, work on professional publications and positions of service held at hospitals and surgery centers. Dr. Adlaka, who was one of the first in northwest Indiana to practice pain full pain management, has recently added a physiatrist to his practice, aiding in the rehabilitation of his patients.

"Adding a Physiatrist has been instrumental with our patients", said Adlaka. "Physiatry puts together physical medicine and rehab. In the end, it relates to getting a patient back to work."

Double board certified in both Anesthesia and Pain Management, Dr. Adlaka is a nationally recognized expert in the field of Chronic Pain Management and serves as a volunteer for the American Society of Interventional Pain Physicians as an instructor, training other physicians in advanced pain management techniques.
