Work Comp Resource CEO to Speak at Conference

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.--Cathi Rogers, CEO of WCGuru.com, the organization informing Indiana work comp professionals on the latest industry news and trends, will be presenting at the Indiana Association for Occupational Health Nurse (IAOHN) seminar April 15. Rogers will provide conference attendees with advice on online searching for professional and medical resources and will also offer navigation tips while searching online for reliable, industry information.

“Searching online for medical and industry resources has gotten easier in the sense of quantity – there is so much more to choose from now, versus 10 or 15 years ago”, said Rogers. “The more complicated part of searching is now deciphering what is relevant, legitimate and isn’t taking up too much of your time.”

Rogers has spent the last couple of years doing just that – offering web users a resource that is quick and provides an abundance of knowledge and healthcare resources with a simple click.

Those attending the IAOHN event will include but is not limited to; case managers, industrial hygienists and safety personal. According to the IAOHN, Occupational Health Nurses are involved in many aspects related to health, including environmental issues, health benefit planning, medical surveillance and the treatment of work related injuries and illnesses. They are responsible for steering the employee to the best and appropriate providers, selecting products and services, managing effective office procedures and controlling costs associated with programs such as workers compensation and health services.
